The company is planning to fill its roster with Korean and Asian musicians and singers, unlike other major record labels in the country, which tend to make room for more international acts. Sources say that SM Entertainment will not only be working with artists but will also be actively recruiting and training producers and DJs. The music director for the new record label, Lee Yong-hee, previously worked with SM Entertainment's youngest artist, f(x) member Victoria Song. Another source says that SM Entertainment is planning to hold concerts for its new label. The label is currently at the planning stages of signing groups, and plans to launch by the end of this year. Previous label efforts to create Korean music businesses in the U.S. through the signing of K-pop artists have failed over the past few years, due to the lack of interest in K-pop in America.
