----- The following description is provided for your benefit and it is not meant to be an entire description of the Outlook control: ----- The TAdvOutlookList component enables you to control the style of Outlook with sorting, grouping, preview pane, drag and drop, and numerous other features. The tool supports automatic grouping of columns that makes organizing items and viewing the relevant ones easier. In addition, it supports automatic sorting for a wide variety of elements, such as text, numbers, date, custom type columns and checkbox. The library includes a variety of column styles, including, but not limited to HTML text, hyperlinks, images, checkboxes or a progress bar, depending on the nature of the application. In the eventuality that the application you are working on deals with complex data and vast quantities, then you can configure it to show a column in a preview pane. Users can drag and drop between groups in the control or additional lists. As far as the customization goes, you can configure the list to blend perfectly with your interface. Therefore, you can choose between various column styles including, but not limited to HTML text, hyperlinks, images, checkboxes or a progress bar, depending on the nature of the application. The component also supports HTML rendering with images along with hyperlinks of texts in columns. Generally speaking, the library enables you to create something similar to a distribution list, which enables you to work with several different groups at the same time in Outlook.
