It needs to wait for a message for a long time before it responds (about 10 minutes or so). The process is a compiled C++ dll. A: Run the process on a separate thread. I have a process in my system that just reads my calendar and notifies me when an event is in the future. It runs on its own thread, and its job is to wait (for a very long time) until it receives a message from my calendar app. This works well for me. A: If you want to build an Executable, like a Console application, that runs with no GUI or input, you can embed a Thread. The Thread will be busy constantly listening to the "EndOfInput" event, and when it gets one, it will switch to a "PendingMessage" state to look for the next message you give it. You'd use poll() in a loop to listen for input.

Q: Getting MySQL error:

Mysql_fetch_array() expects parameter 1 to be resource Have a php page that needs to pull the 'current_month_tickets' from the database and store it into a variable so that i can use a form to update this data. However i am getting the following error:

Warning: mysql_fetch_array() expects parameter 1 to be resource, boolean given in C:\Users\vincefrancy\New folder\examples\login.php on line 11 Here is the line 11 that is causing the error

`$ticket =`
`$user_detail['current_month_tickets'];` I'm fairly new to php so would be grateful for any advise. A: This is caused by a syntax error in a condition. The FALSE is assigned to `$user_detail['current_month_tickets']` but not to the array and then the array is evaluated inside the array, thus the error.
