According to residents, the militants were attempting to loot a house when security forces noticed their presence. The militant fired multiple rounds of bullets, killing two children and two women, while a third person present inside the house was also wounded. Abdul Ghafoor, a Pakistani security official, said the firing started after the militants were forced to flee when the security forces arrived. He said, "According to intelligence reports, these militants belong to the Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) and have been fighting the security forces for the past two years."Q: How can I refactor this repeatedly in python? I have a list of values, which are generators. import random foo = [gen for i in range(10)] How can I generate the same list of values repeatedly without using foo = [gen for i in range(10)] one time? A: You may use list comprehension: foo = [gen() for i in range(10)] Will result in: >>> foo [. at 0x00000000F892488>, . at 0x00000000F892498>, . at 0x00000000F8924B8>, . at 0x00000000F8924D8>, . at 0x00000000F892508>, . at 0x00000000F892518>, . at 0x00000000Occ13bf012
