Win Episcope 2 0 Download. the parkinson study of.Phospholipid-protein mixed micelles of sarcoplasmic reticulum Ca2+-ATPase are formed at high protein concentration but their formation is dependent on temperature and Ca2+ concentration. The mechanism of formation of phospholipid (PL)-protein mixed micelles on sarcoplasmic reticulum (SR) membranes was studied by the use of detergent-dilution (DD) techniques. At a protein-lipid ratio of 1:4 (w/w), a concentration-dependent formation of micelles containing both PL and protein was observed. The micelle formation was fast and completed in less than 5 min. Temperature could be used to control the rate of the conversion of micelles. The rate of the conversion of PL-protein mixed micelles to pure PL micelles was largely independent of temperature, whereas the rate of dissolution of the PL micelles was greatly slowed at reduced temperature. The rate of the formation of PL-protein mixed micelles was markedly accelerated by 100 microM-10 mM Ca^{2+} and the critical Ca^{2+} concentration for the formation of such micelles was in the range of 10-100 microM. The data suggest that PL-protein mixed micelles are formed at micelle equilibrium conditions. The rate of the formation of mixed micelles, however, is highly dependent on temperature and Ca^{2+} concentration.
