Can we pass a as pointer or array? A: Consider the following code: void func(int *a); void func(int a[4]); int main() { int a[4]; func(a); // calls func(int *a) func(a); // calls func(int a[4]) } In the first call to func, func is called with a pointer to an int. In the second, func is called with an array of four ints, i.e. a pointer to an array of four ints. Can we pass a as pointer or array? No. But the difference between pointer and array is not the array per se - it's the fact that a pointer can point to a different type of object than what the array points to. In the call to func,
