mbbs biology, h&s mbbs biology, h&s contains all the information you need to prepare for and succeed in the h&s exams. the ebook contains everything you need to know to prepare for h&s exams and how to maximize your exam results. mbbs biology, h&s excel comprised a 60-hour structured curriculum. the curriculum used a team-based, interdisciplinary approach that infused the core concepts of the chronic care model with the clinical practice expertise of oncology social workers. program participants completed the entire curriculum over a seven-month period. the curriculum was interspersed with small group, plenary sessions to permit refinement and refinement of course content and delivery through active group processes and reflection. participants in these groups were required to reconvene to share experiences and process discussions. excel community medicine is intended as a flexible curriculum that can be tailored by course developers to meet the educational needs of a target audience in a short amount of time. we begin with a review of the literature that identifies the practice of oncology social work, patient and family concerns and the role of the oncology social worker in addressing psychosocial issues and includes an historical examination of the development of the field. next, the excel curriculum framework is described. we then identify what excel is not, including continuing education requirements for social work licensees and insurance reimbursement for psychosocial services. after providing a brief description of the excel curriculum content outline, it is followed by detailed descriptions of course content, room assignments, day-to-day logistics, final examination structure, and participant evaluation process. we conclude the paper with a discussion of the program evaluation process and a list of peer-reviewed publications arising from the program.

the excel curriculum addressed these complex challenges through an evidence-informed curriculum using face-to-face education (two courses per year for 4 years, targeting 400 competitively selected participants), structured expectations for goal achievement, follow-up support at 6 and 12 months post-course, and a variety of distance communication methods. excel was led by a team of expert oncology social work faculty.

the investigative team and faculty collaborated in the development of the curriculum, delivered the program, and were available as mentors to offer support and assistance to participants as they worked toward achieving their institutional change goals. excel participants were encouraged to see themselves as part of a community of like-minded professionals with knowledge and experiences to share in support of one another. numerous studies have shown that there is a significant health disparities gap in cancer diagnosis, treatment, and outcomes [21]. at least one third of women with breast cancer experience persistent or recurrent pain and fatigue symptoms (e.g., tingling in the hands and feet, stiff muscles, feeling run down, and aches) which are associated with poorer psychological and quality of life outcomes [22]. although there are more than 40 community-based resources for cancer survivors and survivors of other diseases and conditions, none address the needs of women with breast cancer, an issue of great concern to many social work nurses. an important component of the ncns framework of cultural competence is that healthcare programs "... be well integrated and well integrated across ... disciplines, and cultures; be responsive to the unique nature and ... cultural backgrounds of our ... population served. culture" [23] (p.5). women with breast cancer must not only be responsive to the cultural uniqueness of their patients, but the cultural uniqueness of the social work profession. oncology social workers play a key role in the health and well-being of women with breast cancer, as evidenced by the psychosocialspiritual needs of this patient population that are routinely unaddressed by other healthcare professionals [24]. excel was developed to address this significant gap by offering a curriculum designed to: improve clinician communication and clinical practices; and in doing so promote professional development and workforce retention. excel is aligned with the ncns framework of cultural competence and recommended by the national coalition of cancer survivorship in the following domains: the social-cultural contexts in which it is developed and delivered; the content and delivery of the curriculum; the competencies mastered through the curriculum; and the outcome of the curriculum [25]. given the very small body of literature on oncology social work, we do not yet fully understand how best to promote oncology social worker professional development. we have made significant progress in the development and delivery of the excel curriculum; however, key challenges remain. while it is already clear that the excel curriculum is appropriate for social work education and practice, much work remains to address the excel curriculum design and delivery, specifically identifying the strategic needs, goals, and timelines of the institution.
