An example of a delta-E value is shown in the example below.Q: bestpractices of using IIF with logical operators in SQL Server 2000 I have a.NET app (SQL Server 2000) that uses: WHERE (... Iif(Y,..., Iif(X,...,...) = Iif(Z,...,...))) I know it's not the most efficient, but is this a valid use of the IIF function? A: There's no problem using the IIF function, however your code looks suspect. I'd consider using something like this: WHERE (... (Z = Y OR Z IS NULL), (X = Z AND X IS NOT NULL),) This way, you'll avoid the problem with the OR, which is that the condition is evaluated multiple times with the same value. Note that X = Z AND X IS NOT NULL could be replaced by X IS NOT NULL. The reason for the double equals is that if you don't have an IS or IS NOT, it's the same as!=, which is less efficient. Unfortunately, this code looks quite horrible 79a2804d6b
