Rats were exposed orally to a single dose of carbon tetrachloride (10 g kg⁻¹), chloroform (200 mg kg⁻¹) or ethyl ether (10 ml kg⁻¹) and blood and bile samples were taken for 24 h following dosing. 2. The major blood metabolite of carbon tetrachloride was trichloromethyl free radical. 3. Chloroform produced a longer lasting metabolite, trichloromethyl free radical, that was detected in bile after a lag period of approximately 2 h. 4. Ethyl ether failed to give a measurable metabolite in blood or bile. So, our next topic of discussion is the benefits of having a home based business rather than working for a regular corporation. Anyone reading this with a business they've developed will have to agree that it's actually a great feeling to be your own boss. But
